Introduction to Film Studies

Discover Brunel

Sample lecture/coursework questions

Alongside your reading you will be tasked with completing practical filmmaking exercises centred around specific briefs given to you in class. Your practical exercises will be produced in your production groups outside of class time and will be screened for peer and tutor feedback each week; this process enables you to practice your skills, reflect on your practice, learn from your peers, and grow as a filmmaker. Your assessments for this module are a portfolio of practical work, a critical analysis essay, and a short film produced in production groups.

Reading list

- Narrative Structures
  David Bordwell & Kristin Thompson (2016) 'Narrative as a Formal System' (chapter3) in Film Art: An Introduction, 11th edition. McGraw Hill Companies, Inc.
- Composition

Home Learning Activities

This is where you will complete weekly activities that will take you through employability skills (such as CV writing) and activities that will help you choose potential career paths. You will learn the following modules:

- Exploring my future
- Improving my employability
- Making my choices
- Student surveys (ignore this)
- Home learning (set one per week to complete ahead of next Friday).
